About the African School on Decentralisation

The African School on Decentralisation (ASD) is offered jointly by the South African Research Chair (SARChI) in Multilevel Government at the Dullah Omar Institute (DOI) of the University of the Western Cape, and the Centre for Federalism and Governance Studies (CFGs) of Addis Ababa University.

The School analyses decentralisation in Africa, presented by leading international experts on decentralisation from Africa and further afield.

The two-week programme examines the concepts and practice of decentralisation in African countries from comparative and interdisciplinary perspectives.

The postgraduate programme aims to give content to the African Union Charter on Decentralisation and to establish a platform for knowledge-sharing on decentralisation from an African perspective. The ASD will include lectures, interactive discussions, case studies and study visits.
